

STUDENT PSYCHOLOGICAL SERVICES

School psychologists shall work closely with members of the instructional services staff and with community agencies. School psychologists strive to employ preventive procedures which will alleviate student problems. These services include preventive programs, consultations about specific children with special needs, consultations regarding general problems in the classroom, psychological evaluations, participation with others in in-service training and staff development and programs initiated by psychologists. Requests for services should be submitted through the principal or the guidance counselor.

The board acknowledges that no psychological tests may be administered to students without written parental consent, nor can the results of such tests be made available to any individual or agency without written parental consent.
